The Finance MBA at Rutgers Business School provides broad professional competence and skills to prepare students for careers in executive positions at banks, financial institutions and other firms. Close to the many financial institutions in New Jersey, New York City, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C., an MBA in finance from Rutgers connects students with excellent job opportunities with the best corporations in the northeast. On the Newark, New Jersey campus, there is a state-of-the-art financial analysis center enabling MBA students to do security analysis, learn portfolio management, and understand the workings of the dealer markets for many financial securities.

Geographically situated at the center of global business, RBS has direct access to the top executives leading the world’s largest banks and financial institutions who serve as guest speakers and hire Rutgers grads. Finance focuses on all aspects of money management, such as investment, collection, disbursement, borrowing, and fund-raising. Finance graduates prepare financial reports needed to conduct operations and to satisfy tax and regulatory requirements. Graduates also oversee the flow of cash and investments, and develop information to assess the present and future financial status of an organization.

Student Perspective

“My Passion is Financial Markets Analysis and Research, and what brought me to Rutgers was their strong standing in the CFA Global Investment Research Challenge. At Rutgers, you have professors with real-world experience that give you the skills needed to excel in whatever you are passionate about. In order to excel, you have to look at things differently than the rest of the world, and that is exactly what Rutgers Business School taught me.

It was just a really great place for me to perfect my passion and enhance my career.”
