Supply Chain Management MBA

Come with your passion, leave with your career

The Supply Chain Management MBA is one of the strategic concentrations at Rutgers Business School. Simply put, Supply Chain Management is how business gets done. According to industry analysts, there is a growing shortage of such expertise as companies streamline and speed up every link in global supply chains to stay competitive. The Department of Supply Chain Management & Marketing Sciences at Rutgers Business School is a driver in reversing this trend by its commitment to excellence and unique strength in world-class research, innovative teaching, and high quality service in supply chain management, marketing science, and their interfaces.

Our top-ranked Supply Chain Management MBA curriculum was designed by faculty and industry experts to ensure that it is comprehensive, applicable, and current. Preparing students to meet and exceed the expectations of future employers is a critical mission of Rutgers’ supply chain management program. Companies actively seek Rutgers graduates for their supply chain management hiring needs, both for internships and full-time opportunities.

Ranked #3 in the nation by Gartner Supply Chain Leaders

In a recent supply chain management study by Gartner Supply Chain Leaders, a survey of how well leading universities are educating professionals to contend with a rapidly changing landscape, the Rutgers Business School Supply Chain Management graduate program ranked #3 in the nation.

Corporate Sponsors of Rutgers SCM Programs

Bayer HealthCare
Becton Dickinson (BD)
Caterpillar
Colgate-Palmolive
Deloitte Consulting LLP
Estée Lauder
Exel
GENCO ATC
IBM
Johnson & Johnson
Kenco Group
Merck & Co., Inc.
Novartis
Panasonic
Pfizer
PSE&G
Schindler Elevator
Verizon

“We are teaching leaders to have strong facilitation and consultative skills to be successful at synchronizing essential tasks across many functions. We understand very well how important a sustainable talent pipeline is to industry, and we are striving to develop graduates with the skill set to become dynamic knowledge leaders in supply chain management.”

Professor Lei Lei
Chair of the Supply Chain Management and Marketing Sciences Department

The Center for Supply Chain Management

Students in the supply chain management concentration also have opportunities to earn course credit while working on real-world industry projects sponsored by corporations affiliated with the Rutgers Center for Supply Chain Management. The Center, which enjoys the participation of a multidisciplinary faculty and strong leadership from senior executives at prestigious companies in the region, conducts cutting-edge research and serves as a valuable business resource.
Employment Outcomes

Students who have graduated from the SCM program at Rutgers Business School frequently received multiple job offers upon graduation. Firms that have recently hired from Rutgers SCM programs include:

Amazon
BASF
Bayer
Becton Dickinson
Bed Bath & Beyond
Bristol Myers Squibb
Burlington Coat Factory
Caterpillar
Colgate Palmolive
Dell Computer
Deloitte Consulting
DuPont
Estée Lauder
Exel/DHL
Ford Foundation
GENCO
Goya Food
IBM
International Flavors & Fragrance
Johnson & Johnson
JP Morgan Chase
Kenco
Kuehne + Nagel
L’Oreal
Mondelez
Novartis
Pharmaceuticals
Panasonic
Phillips
Pfizer
PSE&G
Schindler Elevator
Toys R Us
Tyco Internationals
Unilever
Verizon

Student Perspectives

“When I chose to transition my career to the supply chain industry, deciding which school to attend was an easy choice. Rutgers SCMMS Program is consistently ranked among the best in the world and their professors are subject matter experts with strong connections to industry leaders. My first year at Rutgers has prepared me very well for my summer internship in procurement at a global pharmaceutical company”.

Christopher Lettini
MBA Class of 2015

“As a graduate of the RBS SCMMS program, I have witnessed the faculty’s dedication and commitment to delivering world-class education and providing valuable opportunities to current and former students of the program like myself. Upon graduating from RBS, I began my dream job at Pfizer Inc as a Procurement Associate supporting Scientific Services Outsourcing and have been promoted to Senior Associate in less than a year. I owe a great deal of my success to the RBS SCMMS program.”

Julie Oka, Senior Associate, Pfizer Inc.
MBA Class of 2013

“My 2 years at RBS were a perfect culmination of learning, discovering, collaborating, and performing. Support and guidance from RBS SCMMS faculty played a crucial role in my experiences with case competitions, client projects at Verizon and Gartner, and for an internship at MasterCard. I am currently part of a global team developing enterprise-wide category strategies, breaking silos, and leveraging TCO to ensure that our organization has the right suppliers providing the right service at the right price and place.”

Raghuram Adiraju
MBA Class of 2013

Sampling of Courses

Supply Chain Strategies
Procurement Management & Global Sourcing
Supply Chain Risk Management
Supply Chain Management Industry Project
Supply Chain Sustainability
Managing Strategic Transformations
Lean Six-Sigma
Supply Chain Financial Management
Project Management
Supply Chain Solutions with ERP/SAP I &II
Contract Management
Logistics/transportation Management
Product Design and Supply Chain Alignment

Graduate Admissions

973-353-1234
admit@business.rutgers.edu

Apply Today

business.rutgers.edu/MBA

More than 70 major corporations attended the Rutgers Supply Chain Management Meet and Greet, 2013, including Caterpillar, DuPont, Estée Lauder, and Johnson & Johnson.